Part IV More about the topic:Day-light-saving Time

As international communications and travel increased, it became clear that it would be necessary to establish a common time for all parts of the world. In 1884, an international conference divided the world into 24 time areas. Each zone represents one hour. The astronomical observatory in Greenwich England was chosen as the starting point for the time areas. Twelve areas are west of Greenwich; twelve are east. The time at Greenwich as measured by the sun is called universal time.

The following short passage is about day-light-saving time. Supply the missing words while listening.

Standard time is a worldwide 1) _____ time areas based on longitude. Longitude is the distance on the earth 2) _____ east or west of the first longitude 3) _____ at Greenwich, England. Each time area is 4) _____ longitude wide. Under standard time, the time kept in each time area is that of its 5) _____ longitude line. These lines are 15 degrees, 6) _____ and so on east or west of the 7) _____ line in England. The 8) _____ in time between each nearby area is exactly 9) _____. All clocks keep the 10) _____ time within each area.

In the summer, most people in the United States move their clocks 11) _____ one hour to use day-light-saving time. The only 12) _____ which do not are Hawaii, Arizona and most of Indiana. Some 13) _____ areas of Indiana keep the same time as 14) _____ states and do change to day-light-saving time. The use of day-light-saving time provides an 15) _____ hour of day light in the early evening. Its chief 16) _____ is to save energy by reducing the evening use of 17) _____ for reading. Many countries first used day-light-saving time during 18) _____ time. For example, Britain went on day-light time during 19) _____, so did the United States. In different countries people have different ideas about drinking tea. In China, tea is always served when people get together. Chinese drink it at any time of the day at home or in teahouse. The Japanese have a special way of serving tea called a tea ceremony. Another tea-drinking country is England, where the late afternoon is called "tea time". The English usually make tea in a teapot and drink it with cream and sugar. In the United States, people drink tea mostly for breakfast or after meals. Americans usually use tea bags to make their tea.

Changes of Family Life

[89] 正确答案.A

[89] 难易度.易

[89] 选项数.1

[89] A.

The concept of family life has changed considerably over the years.
/ In earliest times, several generations lived together in clans,
/ which consisted of all living descendants and their husbands or wives.
/ These clans were almost totally self-sufficient,
/ every member contributing in some way toward the survival of the group.
/ The men hunted and fished for food or sometimes maintained flocks of sheep or goats.
/ The women baked bread and roasted the meat their men provided.
/ Special members of the community were selected to make products like pottery, baskets and home weapons.
/ But with the development of greater varieties of food, clothing and shelter,
/ a single clan could no longer develop all the individual skills.
/ Clans merged into larger societies and at the same time broke into smaller units consisting of married couples and their children.
/ Later the Industrial Revolution brought about even more important changes in family life.
/ New inventions brought shorter working hours for men and easier housekeeping routines for women.
/ Today a productive family life suggests not the group's cooperative efforts of working together, / but the pleasant and meaningful sharing of its leisure. /

Part IV More about the topic: Bull Fighting

Section A

Bullfighting is seen as a symbol of _____. It traces its roots to prehistoric worshipping and _____ of bulls.

A carpenter's assistant from the town of Ronda, Spain, Francisco Romero invented the "Muleta," or red cape, used to ___ the bull past the ___. Legend has it Romero rescued a young nobleman by using his falt-brimmed Andalusian hat to lure away an irate bull. Thus was born the modern bullfight. He was the ___ of a bullfighting dynasty, fundamental for bullfighting history. He was apparently the ___ of several characteristics that started to be used in a key period for bullfighting when the modern on foot system was defined, as the use of the ___ to kill the bull face to face.

The bullfight, known in Spain as the "corrida," was first launched as an ___ spectacle sport in ___, at the coronation of King Alfonso VII, and steadily gained in ___ through the years of the Reconquest of Moorish Spain.

A typical Spanish bullfight requires ___ and ___, and is divided into three parts. If the matador has done exceptionally well, the audience will give ___ and throw hats and roses into the arena. The matador will also receive one or two severed ears and the tail of the bull, depending on the ___ of his performance.

Bullfighting has always been ___ in Spain. Supporters of bullfighting regard it as deeply ingrained, ___ of their national culture, but it is criticized by animal rights activists as a pointless and cruel ___.

In fact, bullfighting is not just a Spanish tradition; Portugal, ___ and a few cities in southern ___ also have a history of bullfighting.
